Yesterday, the world lost an incredible man. He only seems tough to those who didn't know him. If you were lucky enough to know him, then you know, he was a teddy bear who had the biggest heart in the world. He was quick to help a friend in need. He was someone who would rather do than talk. He was generous with his knowledge, ready to teach others how to "fix stuff." He volunteered hundreds if not thousands of hours helping to save & restore steam locomotives. Truly, there are not enough words to describe what he meant to so many. The sheer number of calls and texts yesterday reminded how loved he is.

For me, I will miss his laugh (especially when he cracked himself up), his hugs for he gave the best ones, and his unfailing support.

He was my rock. He made me stronger with him than I could ever be without him. For three years, he battled cancer and all of its nasty side effects. Cancer took his voice from him exactly one year ago but he could still whisper. His last words to me were "I love you". Jeff Brisendine - I love you every day and I always will. Fly high my sweet angel. I will miss you more than anyone will ever know.

Jeff didn't want a funeral. He wanted a party. He wanted people to tell their best Jeff stories. So, we will have a celebration of life party for him as soon as the venue can be coordinated.

You, Roger Toevs and 75 others
